

FIRST YEAR REPRESENTATIVE NOMINEE

Tzeyi 'Zee' Koay

Want things done but too busy to do it yourself? Need someone to go to with your concerns? Hoping for blankets in the student lounge? Wondering, what? We have a lounge? Wonder no more! I'm here for all your first year needs. From collaborating with the LSS about opportunities for our professional development to deciphering the location of the law school's elusive water fountains—I've got your back. As the first year representative, I'll be your ears and voice, ensuring your needs are never overlooked.

The three F's form the pillars of what I aim to promote: fulfilment, friendliness, and fairness.

A fulfilling degree involves much more than just seminars. It includes networking opportunities, career guidance, competitions, social events, and more. I will work hard alongside the LSS to continue providing students with these experiences and adapt to any critiques. From meetings to manual labour, I'll give it my all.

While the law school is full of friendly faces, it can be difficult to have that first conversation. I'll encourage a community of acceptance through various social, athletic, creative, and academic events. I'm keen to hear your ideas, no matter how unusual they might be.

I'm committed to fairness and greater representation. Whether you're an international student worried about your limited clerkship opportunities, or a person of colour hoping to hear from people who've overcome similar obstacles, I hope to empower you through the law students' representative body.
