

Hello to our fellow law school beings! Our names are Riley Jackson and Sabine Johnson and we want to represent you as women's directors for 2018/2019. We are passionate about supporting others and creating intentional, inclusive and safe spaces for women-identifying, non-binary and trans students. Our goal is to advocate and educate all students about the experiences of women in the law. We want to implement our shared commitment to intersectionality within MLS through events that highlight the incredible talents of women in the legal sphere.

Riley is a first year international student from the US. During her undergraduate degree in Seattle, her commitment to social justice and empowering women led her to pursue volunteer positions advocating for women's rights in student government as well as positions supporting planned parenthood. She has planned more events than minutes in the day, and is ready to make your ideas a reality.

Sabine is a first year student who you will see drinking out of frank green cups for fear of ever being caught without coffee (or worse, with a coffee in a single use cup). She lived in China for 3 years and speaks Mandarin: she loves to have her voice heard in multiple languages. She volunteers for an organisation that assists women who are in the criminal justice system, and is passionate about facilitating a platform for those who would not otherwise have a voice.

We are so excited about the opportunity to hear your concerns and advocate for a better MLS.
