

A wise philosopher (Drake) once said - “I like when money makes a difference but don’t make you different”.

With this in mind, I aim to take on the role of Director of Sponsorship to allow Melbourne law students to take full advantage of (but still appreciate) the wealth of opportunities we get given.

I have three reasons for why I believe I would be a great director of sponsorship:

1. Experience: My professional experience has provided me with invaluable skills for effective communication with a range of lawyers and professionals;
2. Enthusiasm: I put in 110% effort into whatever I do, and I am extremely eager and excited to take on this challenge; and
3. Engagement: I will strengthen the meaningful connections with our sponsors and endeavor to get them as involved in the law school as possible.

My biggest aim is to try and reach more mid-tier and boutique firms for engagement and sponsorship. This will showcase more diverse avenues of employment that students may work towards. In my own experience working at a boutique firm, I have come to understand that these firms have a lot to offer for law students.

In short, I am not pledging to change your life – I just want to make sure everyone gets access to as many fruitful and useful opportunities as possible whilst at law school.

Feel free to approach me whenever you’d like to if you want to have a chat (except on the netty court!).